

Please do not take away the translators that allow us to hear K-love and Air-1 and other stations up here in Alaska. Being 4,000 miles distant from the lower 48, Alaska is very isolated from the rest of the United States, and listening to these stations help us to feel connected to the rest of the United States, as well as providing programming of its type not found locally here in Fairbanks. It is enjoyed by my friends and family and numerous others in our Community. We depend on our translators to broadcast programming to outlying villages and towns not connected by roads and this helps us to create a broader sense of community throughout the state.

Hannah Wagar Age 17 November 1st 7:27 Alaska time